Hi! I'm Taylor Hess,

A little introduction about myself: I first started photography because I loved photographing landscapes! I love traveling to new places and capturing the adventure and beauty of that new place. Photographs are precious to me because you can always look back at them and remember those times and adventures. In the future, one of my goals is to become a magazine photographer that has landscape photographs being published in National Geographic and another is to also have a fully functional creative studio that has a darkroom and screen printing / sewing area.

When I'm not doing photography, I'm sewing fabrics and materials together, creating quilts and coasters. I find a lot of inspiration in textile design work and I like to sew on my photographs to create texture within a 2D space. I also like to collect pins, coins, stamps, and stickers as a hobby when I travel to all of the places where I adventure to take photographs. In my free time, I also like to put together my own photo books / scrapbooks to remember great memories in my life.
